Focus on real-life interactions

“I want a campaign to plug out of the Internet. Undeniably, the Internet plays an important role in our lives. But I realise that the best memories in my life tend to come from offline, face-to-face relationships. I would campaign for people to focus more on real-life interactions that are more meaningful, rather than on online conversations that tend to lack quality.”

Wendy Cheong, 23, recently graduated with a psychology degree from the University at Buffalo, the State University of New York, at SIM Global Education.