

THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY GRADUATION CEREMONY

Friday, 9 September 2022

The University of Sydney Susan Wakil School of Nursing and Midwifery,
Faculty of Medicine and Health

THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA

WELCOME

Congratulations on your graduation!

Today it is with great pleasure and pride that we recognise and welcome you as a graduate of this university. Your graduation is a celebration of your significant achievements in attaining your degree. We wish you every success and look forward to your ongoing achievements.

As Australia's first university, the University of Sydney has an international reputation as an outstanding teaching institution, as a centre of research excellence and as an active and engaged community leader. Throughout the world you will find fellow graduates involved in intellectual and creative leadership, including those who voluntarily contribute to the wider community.

We warmly welcome you as a member of our global alumni community and hope you will stay connected with the University through this network and visit us again in the future.

Belinda Hutchinson AC
Chancellor

In universities throughout the world, graduation ceremonies are a rite of passage. They signal the end of one phase of your life and the beginning of another, no matter whether you are graduating with an undergraduate degree or a PhD. They mark the transition from membership of the student body to membership of an even larger community of alumni. They are a time of both nostalgia and optimism for the future.

An in-person graduation ceremony is a wonderful way to round out your studies with us. So it is with great pleasure that I welcome you and your family and friends here to the SIM Headquarters today to celebrate this momentous occasion. You have worked hard to get here, and we are proud of your achievements.

I wish you all the best for the next step in your career. Remember, too, that you are welcome back at any time, to study with us again, to become an active alumni volunteer, or simply to visit your university.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY

The University of Sydney is a leading comprehensive research and teaching university committed to the transformative power of education and to fostering greater knowledge and understanding of the world and its people.

As Australia's first university, the University of Sydney has a longstanding reputation of excellence that spans almost 170 years.

We are:

- one of Australia's largest and most prestigious universities
- a member of the Group of Eight which comprises Australia's major research-intensive universities
- ranked among the top 1% of universities worldwide
- consistently ranked in the top 50 universities in the world

The University is unique among Australia's leading universities in the breadth of disciplines it offers. We are home to a vibrant community of more than 73,000 of the best and brightest minds from around the world. Our alumni community has over 380,000 members in more than 170 countries. We attract academics whose passion and brilliance drives them to become leaders in their field. The University maintains the highest standards of teaching and research and, in nursing, the highest standards of clinical competency and ethical integrity.

We are consistently among the top universities for research funding and our research has been rated world standard or above in all disciplines by the Australian Government.*

*Australian Government Excellence in Research for Australia 2018

The University's global network of partner institutions covers research collaboration, joint teaching projects and staff and student exchanges across many countries in Europe, North America and Asia. The University's academics are involved in collaborative research projects with colleagues overseas, with governments and other organisations to further knowledge and improve people's lives.

World-class Education

Join an exclusive network of leaders and alumni, with a globally recognised qualification that will give you the professional edge and help achieve your career ambitions. Within our 8 faculties and university schools, we offer the widest range of academic programs of any Australian university, giving you the freedom and flexibility to discover your passions and career. Our graduates have gone on to become prime ministers, Rhodes scholars and Nobel laureates. In creating the first tertiary education institution in Australia in 1850, the University's founders recognised the power of education to change society. We hold that belief just as strongly today.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY SUSAN WAKIL SCHOOL OF NURSING AND MIDWIFERY

The University of Sydney Susan Wakil School of Nursing and Midwifery, also known as Sydney Nursing School at the University of Sydney, is one of the most prestigious nursing schools in Australia. It has a strong reputation for research in nursing and midwifery as well as cross-disciplinary and collaborative research. In 2012, 2015 and 2018 our excellence in research was recognised as “above world class” and in 2013 we received a Vice-Chancellor’s award for “Systems that Achieve Collective Excellence in Learning and Teaching”.

Sydney Nursing School is currently ranked number 1 in Australia and 12th in the world for University nursing education and research excellence (QS World University Rankings 2022).

We produce world-class graduates who have the core skills and knowledge to provide the best care for people and contribute to important decisions about future trends in treatment, patient care and disease prevention. We prepare our students for leadership. Our post-registration courses, including the Bachelor of Nursing (Post-registration) and advanced learning postgraduate coursework degrees, encourage registered nurses to increase their skill and knowledge base to respond to and thrive in evolving health care environments. Mindful of increasing and expanded roles for nursing professionals globally, we provide an intellectually stimulating and collegial environment for both our nursing students and staff.

Sydney Nursing School enjoys its many international partnerships in building nursing education, workforce capacity and research to enhance patient care and health outcomes globally. As part of a global university, our nursing degrees have a strong international emphasis, including opportunities for students to gain international clinical experience. In this context, we particularly value our ongoing relationship with the nursing community in Singapore and the Singapore Institute of Management to deliver the Bachelor of Nursing (Post- registration) and Bachelor of Nursing (Honours) programs.

Sydney Nursing School congratulates its Singapore nursing graduates and wishes them all the very best in their nursing careers and shaping the future of health care. We look forward to their lifelong engagement with the nursing community and the University of Sydney.

The hard work is over, but the fun is just beginning

Congratulations, you've finished your degree. Now it's time to look towards the future and discover the possibilities that await you.

As a University of Sydney graduate, you have access to resources and support to help you find the perfect career options. From connecting with employers via the Careers Centre to lifelong learning with our continuing education classes or free online courses.

You can also get more from life by taking advantage of a diverse program of cultural and artistic offerings. From visual to performing arts, painting masters and musical maestros, we offer a wide variety of local and international experiences to our alumni.

The options are limitless, the choice is yours.
