SIM – THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY GRADUATION CEREMONY

19 SEPTEMBER 2025

SIM Campus,
Singapore

WELCOME

Congratulations on your graduation!

It is with great pride and pleasure that I welcome you as a graduate of the University of Sydney.

Graduation marks a significant milestone—an achievement that reflects your dedication, perseverance, and pursuit of academic excellence. Today, we celebrate not only your success, but also the promise of your future.

As Australia's first university, the University of Sydney is recognised globally for its excellence in teaching, research, and community engagement. Our graduates are leaders and changemakers, contributing across industries, cultures, and continents.

Wherever life takes you next, you'll find yourself part of a vibrant global network of Sydney alumni—creative thinkers, innovators, and leaders making a difference around the world.

We warmly welcome you into this community and hope you'll stay connected with the University. We look forward to seeing where your journey leads and to welcoming you back in the future.

WELCOME

In universities throughout the world, graduation ceremonies are a rite of passage. They signal the end of one phase of your life and the beginning of another, no matter whether you are graduating with an undergraduate degree or a PhD. They mark the transition from membership of the student body to membership of an even larger community of alumni. They are a time of both nostalgia and optimism for the future.

An in-person graduation ceremony is a wonderful way to round out your studies with us. So it is with great pleasure that I welcome you and your family and friends here to the SIM Headquarters today to celebrate this momentous occasion. You have worked hard to get here, and we are proud of your achievements.

I wish you all the best for the next step in your career. Remember, too, that you are welcome back at any time, to study with us again, to become an active alumni volunteer, or simply to visit your university.

THE LADY HAILSHAM STAFF

The Lady Hailsham Staff was presented to the University in February 1982 by the Sir Robert Menzies Oration Committee. It is a memorial to Lady Hailsham, who died tragically in a horse-riding accident two days before her husband was to deliver the University's Inaugural Oration in May 1978.

The staff was designed by Mr David Connolly, an alumnus of the University and a member of the Australian Parliament, and crafted by V Hemmingsen of Adelaide and P Noakes of Sydney. It has a shaft of Tasmanian blackwood with the tip and joins in silver. Surmounting the staff is a viscountess's coronet (a mark of Lady Hailsham's position in British society) on top of a silver thistle and a ball of marble.

The marble comes from Connemara in the west of Ireland, the district from which Lady Hailsham's family originated. The coronet is studded with sapphires from Sri Lanka, where she spent part of her childhood.

The thistle symbolises the association with Sir Robert Menzies, Australia's longest serving prime minister, who was invested in 1963 as Australia's only Knight of the Order of the Thistle.

The staff is carried in procession by the Yeoman Bedell.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY

The University of Sydney is one of the world's leading, comprehensive research and teaching universities. We offer an exceptional range of disciplines – more than 400 areas of study – and our community includes around 70,000 students, 9000 permanent and fixed-term staff and 460,000+ alumni in more than 170 countries.

Australia's first university, we were founded in 1850 on principles of merit and equity. For 175 years we have endeavoured to hold true to these principles through our commitment to leadership for good: shaping and sharing knowledge, empowering generations of students, and addressing some of the world's most complex challenges.

Our aim is to make lives better not just by producing leaders of society, but through equipping our people with the qualities that allow them to serve all of our communities at every level.

Currently ranked among the top 25 universities in the world in the QS World University Rankings 2025, we're consistently placed among the best universities and globally renowned for our teaching and research.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY SUSAN WAKIL SCHOOL OF NURSING AND MIDWIFERY

The University of Sydney Susan Wakil School of Nursing and Midwifery, also known as Sydney Nursing School at the University of Sydney, is one of the most prestigious nursing schools in Australia. It has a strong reputation for research in nursing and midwifery as well as cross-disciplinary and collaborative research.

Sydney Nursing School is currently ranked number 1 in Australia and 20th in the world for University nursing education and research excellence (QS World University Rankings by Subject 2025).

We produce world-class graduates who have the core skills and knowledge to provide the best care for people and contribute to important decisions about future trends in treatment, patient care and disease prevention. We prepare our students for leadership. Our post-registration courses, including the Bachelor of Nursing (Post-registration) and advanced learning postgraduate coursework degrees, encourage registered nurses to increase their skill and knowledge base to respond to and thrive in evolving health care environments. Mindful of increasing and expanded roles for nursing professionals globally, we provide an intellectually stimulating and collegial environment for both our nursing students and staff.

Sydney Nursing School enjoys its many international partnerships in building nursing education, workforce capacity and research to enhance patient care and health outcomes globally. As part of a global university, our nursing degrees have a strong international emphasis, including opportunities for students to gain international clinical experience. In this context, we particularly value our ongoing relationship with the nursing community in Singapore and the Singapore Institute of Management to deliver the Bachelor of Nursing (Post- registration) and Bachelor of Nursing (Honours) programs.

Sydney Nursing School congratulates its Singapore nursing graduates and wishes them all the very best in their nursing careers and shaping the future of health care. We look forward to their lifelong engagement with the nursing community and the University of Sydney.
