BE THE DIFFERENCE

SIM Campus,
Singapore

The University of Stirling's Coat of Arms dates back to November 1966 and, following an application to Lord Lyon, the University gained its University status by Royal Charter on 27 December 1967.

The Coat of Arms may be described as an arched bridge topped by a tower and surrounded by open books. The bridge may represent a governor or magistrate, the tower safety and guardianship, while the open books have clear associations with learning and knowledge. The imagery portrays the University as an official guardian entrusted with the safekeeping of the process of imparting knowledge, while serving the wider community.

On a visual level, the three elements of the Coat of Arms may be interpreted as a reflection of the University's striking location in a historic Scotland, evoking Stirling Bridge, the National Wallace Monument and the University itself.

CONGRATULATIONS FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF STIRLING

Graduation is always a special moment when everyone at the University pauses to celebrate the achievements of you, our graduates.

Today's ceremony marks another important chapter in the partnership between the University of Stirling and Singapore Institute of Management (SIM) Global Education. The continued success of our collaboration has created opportunities for students across Singapore, and I am delighted that you, along with your family and friends, are here to celebrate and enjoy the occasion.

The reward and recognition you receive today is the result of your hard work and commitment, and all of us at Stirling and SIM Global Education share in your pride. Our partnership with Singapore Institute of Management Global Education continues to go from strength to strength and is a key part of Stirling's global outlook.

At Stirling, our graduates stand out. They are motivated, self-confident, digitally aware and enterprising individuals who are making an impact on the world stage. Our flexible courses, study abroad opportunities and internship experiences help students excel in their chosen careers.

Stirling is a research-intensive university, where more than 80% of our research is rated either world-leading or internationally excellent (REF 2021). Our researchers are making a difference by responding to the increasingly complex challenges facing society. By adopting a mission-oriented, collaborative and interdisciplinary approach, our experts are working to improve the lives of people with dementia, support communities through sustainable aquaculture research, and find creative ways to inspire better health, ageing and wellbeing.

The University of Stirling is Scottish University of the Year 2027 and UK Sports University of the Year 2027 (Daily Mail University Guide) and has twice been awarded the Queen's Anniversary Prize, the UK's highest academic honour, in recognition of the work of our Institute of Aquaculture and Institute for Social Marketing and Health. Stirling is also a QS five-star rated university.

In recognition of our excellence in business education, we are accredited by the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB) International, an accolade held by just 6% of business schools globally.

STIRLING'S STORY OF SPORTING SUCCESS

The University of Stirling is Scotland's University for Sporting Excellence – a longstanding designation from the Scottish Government – and UK Sports University of the Year 2027 (Daily Mail University Guide). Through the powerful combination of sport, research and learning, we are helping athletes achieve success on the world stage, improving health and wellbeing, and developing the next generation of leaders in sport.

Our world-class facilities, including a 50-metre swimming pool, strength and conditioning suites, indoor tennis courts and golf simulator, provide an exceptional environment for students, staff and the wider community.

With one of the largest sports scholarship programmes in the UK, the University is home to leading athletes and has earned an international reputation for sporting success. Since 2012, Stirling athletes have won 13 Olympic and Paralympic medals, alongside numerous honours at Commonwealth, World and European Championships.

At the most recent Commonwealth Games, 22 Stirling athletes won 24 medals, while the University's elite swimmers secured seven gold medals for Great Britain at the European Aquatics Championships, breaking a host of records in the process.

Stirling sits at the heart of Scottish sport – hosting national centres for swimming, tennis and triathlon, as well as the sportscotland institute of sport and Commonwealth Games Council for Scotland. These partnerships create valuable opportunities for athletes, researchers and students.

Committed to supporting the health and wellbeing of our community, our Sports Centre offers extensive opportunities for physical activity, while the University's 330-acre parkland campus encourages outdoor exercise and recreation. Community initiatives, including our Be Connected programme and more than 120 Students' Union clubs and societies, help people stay active, build friendships and promote wellbeing.

Our sports courses equip students with the knowledge, skills and experience to succeed in a wide range of careers, and our Centre for Research and Innovation in Sport delivers world-class, multidisciplinary research that creates meaningful benefits for athletes, coaches, organisations and communities around the world.
